

Dr Hany Mohamed Aly Ahmed was born in Göttingen, Germany in 1980. He is an Egyptian and was graduated from Faculty of Dentistry, Ain Shams University (ASU), Egypt, with a Bachelor's Degree in Dental Sciences (B.D.S.) in 2002. He started his postgraduate program in Endodontics with a Higher Dental Diploma (H.D.D.) degree in 2006. After obtaining the specialty degree, Dr. Ahmed continued his postgraduate studies, and joined a Master Degree program (M.Sc.D.) at the School of Dental Sciences, Universiti Sains Malaysia (USM), Malaysia in 2009 which was converted to Ph.D. in 2011. Dr. Ahmed has been granted a number of national and international awards for his research on the application of Portland cements in Endodontics including the IADR (SE Asian division) for the best laboratory research in 2014. He has also been awarded as a supervisor for several elective research projects in Malaysia and Singapore. Dr. Ahmed has published many research and review articles in recognized international journals such as Journal of Endodontics, International Endodontic Journal and Australian Dental Journal. In 2012, Dr. Ahmed has introduced a new classification for endo-perio lesions, published in ENDO. Currently, he is a senior lecturer and endodontist at the School of Dental Sciences, USM. He also is a scientific reviewer and editorial board member in national and international journals.